

Urinary Symptoms

This is a common problem in cats and dogs. A very important point here is that male animals, especially cats, can get an obstructed urethra within hours from the sandy silt accompanying a bladder infection, so any male cat or dog seen repeatedly straining to urinate MUST be taken immediately for veterinary attention as this can cause death quite quickly.

Female animals have a wider urethra so can often be safely treated at home. Another important point is that cats and dogs need an acidic urine, ideally about pH 5.5 to 6, with which to dissolve bladder stone silt and make bacterial infection a near impossibility. Therefore, giving plenty of water to drink and ascorbic acid (it must be the acidic form of vitamin C – sodium or calcium ascorbate are respectively alkaline or neutral so cannot be used) can reduce cystitis markedly in hours.

As with humans Aconite is the first remedy to think of for sudden onset of symptoms especially after a fright or becoming chilled along with Ferrum phos for the first stage of the inflammatory process. Cantharis is usually very effective, it is understood to have a tonic effect on the bladder or consider Apis if the animal is refusing to drink, Lycopodium can help if 'gravel' is present in the urine, Staphysagria is a good remedy for breeding animals or if the symptoms come on after abdominal surgery or an event that could be associated with suppressed anger.

The correct remedies plus herbs (barberry, couch, parsley, crataeva, dandelion leaf, cranberry, echinacea) can have a greater long term success rate than antibiotics, according to research literature, for chronic or recurrent cystitis, even of bacterial origin.

Written in conjunction with Dr Clare Middle who runs a natural therapies only veterinary practice in Bibra Lake. Ph: 08 9494 1243, www.claremiddle.com

Books and Info Sheet: Download and print our Animal info sheet or Urinary Factsheet or refer to our Homoeopathy for the Home Prescriber book or eBook. We also have excellent Homoeopathy for Animals books and free information available through our website.